“THERE WAS A TIME WHEN....”

We are still here even though the world about us changes and morphs into yet a stranger version of the Twilight Zone even as far away as here in Singapore.

American Politicos are seriously talking of the ways and means to intern their political opposition – all 75 million of them into internment camps, taking children away from descent parents to re-educate them into the wonders of the dawn of this

GREAT SOCIAL RESET.

I wish I was kidding or that this is a bad, direct-to-video Sci-Fi Movie instead of the lead story on both CNN and the BBC this morning.

Emil called all this and had endlessly, faced the mocking by most of us as to how he had gone much further than even HG Wells and Orwell would have ever dreamed. So, the day has arrived for a return to Emil’s Zeateppe Age.

“THERE WAS A TIME WHEN....”

I was about to ask “How did we ever arrive at this day?” and quickly the old man reminded me that that was as pointless as asking “How did we get here?” after the car crash.

The sad point was that he was right and that upset me as I always believed that he had never been quite “right” and that he would be the voice of reason in the current situation was the most frustrating part of this adjustment.

If we pretended that we just woke up and the world was in the process of being transformed into a very bad episode of “Sliders” (a cheesy 1990’s era TV show not on time travel but in a guy who discovered a way to use a wormhole to visit parallel universes) and Rembrandt “The Crying Man” had been replaced by the Al Sharpton – who keeps asking me age of the dawn of this “Great Social Reset” and understand just how helpless we have all become to “slide” out of this Brave New Age of Corporate Socialism back into our true real world universe before we had been somehow tripped down into this whirling maelstrom of a seemingly endless maze of ever deeper, darker rabbit holes - each with a rather odd collection of whiny, pale children of the Lost Woke all dressed in black hoodies, continually flaying themselves and others with a flagellant mantra of “White Privilege!”

This last screen is so sad as what they hate, they are the poster child of that most fowl, cruel and evil “White Privilege.”

Somehow they have forgotten that they are MOSTLY white, born into the privilege of having their daily bread paid by well-to-do parents that are also guilty of these crimes and in the end, someone will call them on this.

STRANGE BUT...EMIL SAYZ IS TRUE?

DATELINE: Penang Port Harbor Detention Complex

What was once a folk tale at best may have a seed of truth if not more and it does readily explain a lot of what we currently have no rational theory for other than to admit “Dude, I don’t Know?” which translated into the fact that we can’t explain this all away as a tin foil, conspiracy story of untruth or disinformation. Emil claims (which should be our first concern) that he stumbled upon all of this by mere chance while cooling his heels in the local jail in Penang after he tried to hijack a fisherman’s row boat and row out of the harbor in order to flee what he had come to believe was his never-to-end detention in Penang after the island was locked down in late March due to the demon, virus plague from his CCP Buddies. It was there that he befriended a fellow inmate who was in a the cell next to his own deluxe isolation suite – as the Penang Authorities were rather concerned with Emil's real mental stability and towards the danger he might pose to all of his fellow inmates...

LONG STORY SHORT...

The other inmate was an elderly Korean gentleman and given Emil's long trouble(s) with the Korean Government; they hit it off rather quickly over their love of Korea/Seoul. The gentleman was a refuge from the North and had held a senior scientific, leadership role up until his daring midnight escape much in the same vain as Emil's not so successful plan to flee Penang.

Initially, the scientist had been given a refugee visa and was told that they would not honor North Korea's demand(s) for his immediate seizer and an even more prompt return home. He lived freely for several months before he was arrested and is now in the awaiting his deportation back to North Korea mostly due to the antecedence of CCP Officials with very close financial ties to the local politicos.

Given Emil's even more tetanus statue with the CCP; this made them almost like brothers...

Conflict Comrades who ended up sharing a burnt-out fox-hole on this plague battlefield.

In the long evenings that followed, the scientist shared a remarkable story that seems ripped directly from the pages of an Issac Asimov novel, the front page of the National Enquirer or even the fabled, World Globe, right next to retelling of the Batboy Urban Legands.

He was a rather rumpled older gentleman who you could (in mere seconds) see that he was the product of a rather classical or scientific education and you were struck right away by the fact that he had a commanding sense of presence even here in the corner cell at the Detention Centre even when he was incased in the DC's oversized (one size fits all) and very wrinkled/crumpled pink prison jumpsuit - which we are all forced to wear (as I was told by one of the friendlier guards and to be truthful, I don't think he was joking as he didn't seem the type that would) in order to distinguish us from the normal administrative straights and the prison guards as they didn't have an official program (like most other sporting events do) to tell you who all the players are.

There was something about his old fashion manners that you could immediately grasp as being very much out-of-place in this setting of lay-about's, drunks and just plain mean, nasty troublemakers from the underbelly of this tropical paradise and I was struck that his manners were neither fake or half-hearted but, they were deeply imbedded in him by (no doubt) countless generations of proper social breading at the very upper edges of a society that the majority of us rouge, jail house scum would never get within 5,000 yards of...thanks to the proper enforcement of restraining orders and strict membership codes/policies. For quite a while, I was taken back and intimidated by being the presence of a true gentleman.

all of the grand gated communities, the private rent-a-cops/mercenaries, the elite's security or their proper restraining orders all put together. After a few moments of sheer, awkward "please don't kill me" moments in stunted conversation led us to a middle ground in our personal love of Korea and especially, our mutual love of the rolling hills that surrounded the great city of Seoul and we spent the large part of the remaining afternoon swapping stories of places and people we knew in Seoul. Mr. Kim was a nice, soft spoken man of extreme learning and letters who did share many common interests with me as faith (maybe, that fowl, Old Lady Luck) had tossed us in adjoining cells here in a tropical paradise turned by recent current events and a very overhyped “Killer” Plague into a pleasant, Plague Refugee Transit Complex.

Go figure...!

There must be a greater reasoning to this meeting other than just random choice as the conversation dwindled of our collected memories of a city that we were both much fond of and then morphed off into much more traditional jail house fare about:

over a simple misunderstand in language and spin regarding my “borrowing” a fisherman’s small boat which I used in my effort to escape from this island paradise by attempting to row it out into the International Shipping Lanes and off to a pirate’s freedom.

While Mr. Kim was rather tight lipped (at first) as to the reason(s) or in retelling the events that led him here to the exclusive Penang Detention Center and gift shop back in the day. It was only after, I did go into great detail and even tried to create several visual aids to better illustrate the whole sum of how I was being punished over a mistranslation, the cultural difference between my usage of the word “borrowed” and the official report’s determination of “stole.”

Mr. Kim was (in a fact that I was later to learn) a well-known Korean Scientist who had been conscripted by the Japanese (his country's colonial overlords before/during World War 2) to do secret research in a mountain complex in what is now North Korea.

In the passing days following his liberation by the Great Soviet Armies that had swept down out of Manchuria at the end of the World War proved his freedom was very short lived with the Russians re-conscribing him by armed force (much as the Japanese had done) to continue on with his original research for what would be the next several generations.

In a most daring midnight escape, sometime in the Spring of 2018, that seemed much in the same vain as Emil's not so successful plan to flee Penang; his escape was arranged by an equally secret resistance group based in Seoul and funded by "not to be discussed" group of international corporations that had learned of his revolutionary research through other defectors that had been brought to Freedom. Sadly! Once back in Seoul, it became clear that his research was so far in advance of current scientific understanding that it was imbecilely discarded and dismissed as Science Fiction. Funding for his research was initially cut back and then stopped without warning or proper notice as the International Consortium just cut him loose without financial resources or more importantly, from the protection that they had offered him against a very angry North Korean Leadership who well understood that his research was not science fiction but, cutting edge (5th/6th generation technology) and that he needed to be recaptured at all cost. After several failed and bungled attempts to recapture him in Seoul, it seems that with the help of some “not to be named” members of South Korea’s Intelligence Community; he was relocated to Penang under an assumed name of “Mr. Clyde Jones.”

Everything was going swimmingly well here in Penang for Mr. Jones until the virus plague rose out of the Great Amerikan Industrial Heartland (Central China), the panic of lock downs, shelter-n-place decrees and some local, neighborhood Spiderman in the local immigration office took it upon themselves to start investigation the motley collection of Foreign Devils stranded here in Penang.

Seems that a Mr. Jones was suspect if by no other matter than his common (much too common) sounding, generic name – this led to further confusion when he was forced into the immigration office as he didn’t look like what they assumed a “Mr. Jones” would.

Long story...finally, it was discovered that he was a rather wanted (desired) man of science whom the North Korean Counsel was desperately trying to seek his extradition back to North Korea but, was having little luck thanks to the closer ties that the South Koreans had (financially) with Penang over their “cheap-a***” (can’t use the word “a***” in print in Singapore under the decency laws) cousins from up in the north.

It wasn’t until the local agents for the CCP got involved did it look like those Northern Punks might get their wish of Professor Kim on a China Airways flight back to Korea.

This was very quickly, it was another bounding moment as you all know about me and my little buddies in the CCP’s Thought Police (Hong Kong Division) and much to Professor Kim’s misfortune; this was another launching

While you could see that Professor Kim was listening politely as I boldly recapped my detention in Hong Kong without the loss of even the smallest detail(s) but, you could see that he was troubled by my connection(s) to many the same people that where trying to put him (now) on a plane back to North Korea. I realize now, that he must have been connecting-the-dots as to why I would be here in a cell next to his and as to what my role (if any) was to be in his upcoming deportation hearings.

Professor Kim (Yes! That isn't his real name, Campers!) claims to have lived and worked in a township called Hamheung, in northeast North Korea which later research shows does exist and according to the Internet (take that for what it is worth) Hamheung is not a large area, a mere 15 square miles but, seems important. What was surprising was that the same articles said that at its peak, there were probably about 45,000 personnel in such a small location, many of them ``Korean laborers, conscripted students/professors, convicts, and prisoners of war," who were primarily involved in ``manufacturing synthetic fuel, explosives, and industrial chemicals."

I did read that there were five large industrial complexes in the outlining regions of the township of Hamheung that the United States CIA/NSC were like totally unsure of their design or purpose. In one of these complexes, Professor Kim claims to have spent several generations (1940-2018) working on a very specific research that they had started in 1939 under leadership of several Japanese Research Teams that he told me were working under the direct authority of the Imperial War Council and he had been told, that all their work was sanctioned directly by the Emperor due to the revolutionary concepts of quantum mechanics that was the core of what they were dealing in. As the evening rolled into the next morning, Professor Kim educated me the best way that he could given to my total lacking of a quality/classical education – I was properly under educated in the classical, American Public School System that promoted football and pep rallies much ever more than traditional studies or the sciences.

Professor Kim confirmed what I would later read in a yellowing page of the Los Angeles

Times and further in microfiche of a once classified Pentagon report to congress from the early 1960's that in October 1950 (during the height of the Korean War and McArthur's advance on the Yalu River) that the South Korean army captured a large underground bunker and complex in the Hamheung area believed to be a Russian uranium processing plant but the next month the United States military reversed and refuted all of this report. I discovered this out of a stray comment by the professor that one of the few times that he and his team had been allowed to leave was during the American Advance in 1950...he said that they had been relocated to let another former Japanese Research Center in Manchuria and continued work there for almost a year although he never mentioned or implied any nuclear research was being done at Hamheung – maybe, it wasn't known to him or might well be, yet, another subject that he skipped over quite quickly?

Most researchers who have explored this topic have played up the nuclear research that was the primary purpose of the large complexes that surrounded Hamheung and that indeed, that it had cumulated in the Japanese development of a primitive nuclear – which they tested merely days before the Americans beat them to the gun and had flattened Hiroshima with what is now believed to been a German designed nuclear bomb (this is a rather long, complicated story that has only recently been partially declassified) as the American Project had been unable to produce the required uranium isotopes needed for a bomb in time and they used one of the several, uranium bombs that Martin Bormann had use to batter for his free passage to South America (in May of 1945)...remember, the primary focus of the Manhattan Project had been the development of a plutonium bomb instead of the cheaper (but more tactically limited in size) uranium bombs that the German Military had developed (and tested on the Eastern Front – another long story that proves to be rather interesting in how Stalin threatened poison gas attacks on German Cities unless the Germany Military ceased use of these new bombs and the other German WMDs...Fuel-Air bombs that had been used as early as 1941 on the German Advance towards Moscow)...

claim that the Russians captured Hamheung only a day or so following the Japanese Nuclear Test while other sources claim that the Russian actually occupied the city on August 22 about ten days after the test.

Unnamed Sources claim that seven unnamed leading Japanese scientists who helped build the bomb were captured and six of them were originally to be sent to Moscow but according to what I discovered they were Oishi Takeo, Wakabayashi Tadashiro, Takahashi Rikizo, Sato Sei, Fukuda Koken and Tsuchida Meiro, who all were real people but of none of whom turned out to be physicists, but some were chemists" and I discovered were under the command of the brilliant Japanese Senior Captain Hasegawa Hideo stayed on with Professor Kim's Team. they were all arrested and charged with a bogus charge of the destruction of Russian government property (a common charge/offence of the vast population in the Russian Gulags) and eventually found guilty and were sentenced to imprisonment with hard labor in Siberia for 5 to 7 years unless they agreed to continue on with their research for their new colonial masters, the Russians. Most decided like Professor Kim that it was better to continue his research and not die in some Siberian, Artic Labour Camp and so, they continued their research until modern times. According to one American newspaper that I found in a moldy heap of old boxes at my local library, told a news story (remember real news stories?) the rapid Russian seizure of the Japanese security (many still properly manned by like minded former Japanese clerks who agreed that it was better to serve the new master than to die in slave labor) successfully was shrouding the truth of the Japanese Industrial Development in Korea and Manchuria. The article went on to tell us that all this was gnawing at the curiosity of America's top intelligence officials." In an article from another periodical of the period reported that Edwin Pauley, a member of the American Congressional War Reparations Committee, inspected Northern Korea tell how he had been restricted to certain areas (like Hamheung) and was under constant Russian supervision. There was even report from the Red Cross (in a report to the new United Nations) that they were barred from traveling into the Greater Hamheung Area.

At the same time, there was yet another conflict over claims that the Russians (who seemed to be concerned with maintaining secrecy in the region) on August 29, 1945, shot down an American B-29 bomber attempting to drop provisions and medical supplies at an allied prisoner of war camp near the city. They later claimed they thought the aircraft might have been a Japanese bomber even though it had American markings and the war had ended nearly two weeks earlier. I found a follow up on this report so, I assume that it was true...according to a period publication of a book "The Flight of the Hog Wild" reported that there were three B-29s sent out on a "mercy missions" to provide food and supplies for the 302 British and 52 Australian POWs held near Hamheung.

Although the book implied that while the first two B-29s may have been legitimate, the third B-29, known as the Hog Wild, was probably on a photo recon mission sent by the US Military out of their new regional Intel Command Center and the restored air fields in Pusan.

So far...most of the implied history of Hamheung matched up with Professor Kim's remembrance and the details of our conversation match up with the historic records that still exist out in the murky ether of the Internet (for what it is worth!).

EDITOR NOTE: We are pausing Emil here as this seems well worthy of it's own special edition to do proper justice to this unfolding story and even if Emil deeply disagrees...We have final edit rights! Stay tune! Coming soon!

“A thunderhead of judgment was gathering in my gaze
And it made most people nervous
They just didn't want to know
What I was seeing in the refuge of the roads”

“I pulled off into a forest
Crickets clicking in the ferns
Like a wheel of fortune”

"I heard my fate turn, turn turn
And I went running down a white sand road
I was running like a white-assed deer"

The Zeateppe Age of Emil

“Running to lose the blues to the innocence in here
These are the clouds of Michelangelo
Muscular with gods and sungold
Shine on your witness in the refuge of the roads”

"Nothing to Fear!"

DATELINE: VIRUS INTERMENT in Penang...

Finished these up after breakfast...camped out at the cafeteria doors to get a good selection...
when I worked in the TV Biz and at event buffets the only worthwhile rule to remember is...

"Snooze ya loose! Bubba!"

I was amazed to watch these rich people (people in this industry do rather well - accept me...long story!) swarm the buffet like locusts...hesitate and it is all but gone...Snooze and you will go hungry!
Anyway!

What brought that on?

Who knows...I blame it (and everything these days) on that damn plague virus!
